Popular Frankfort Student And Former Pastor's Son Married

Palms and white gladioli banked the altar of St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed church at Frankfort, Illinois, where Miss Corinne Krusemark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Krusemark became the bride of Paul Gerhold, lieutenant in the United States Army, son of the Rev. and Mrs. G. S. Gerhold of Champaign, Monday evening at 8:00 o'clock. The bridegroom's father officiated. Preceding the ceremony, Glenn Voss presented a group of organ selections and accompanied Mrs. Wesley Hollstein who sang "Ave Maria" and "Be-cause".

The bride, beautiful in the traditional white satin, entered with her father. Her gown was colonial in style, with ermine and a hoop beneath the full skirt fashioned with a short train. The yoke of chantilly lace was V shaped and extended to the shoulders. The long tightly fitted sleeves were edged in lace ruffles gathered at the wrists. Her fingertip veil of illusion net was gathered at the back of the crown and held in place with three satin bands with clusters of orange blossoms on either side. She carried a colonial bouquet of white violets tied with white satin streamers.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Krusemark Jr. attended the young couple. Mrs. Krusemark's gown was of ice blue satin with a fitted bodice, bracelet length sleeves and a full overskirt of net. She wore pink sweet peas in her hair and carried a colonial bouquet of the same flowers, tied with pink satin.

The junior bridesmaid was Mary Ann Whitlark, the bride's cousin, who wore a floor length gown of a deeper shade of blue satin and a velvet hair ornament. Phyllis Gerhold, the bridegroom's niece was the flower girl. Her frock was of white marquisette and she wore a white velvet hair bow. Both girls carried tiny nosegays of pink sweetpeas. The candles were lighted by another cousin of the bride, Frederick Whitlark, ensign in the United States Navy. He also served as usher, with Wm. Breidert.

After receiving congratulations and best wishes in the foyer of the church, a reception was held in the church parlors for forty relatives and friends. The bridal party's table was centered with a three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and army officer, and was flanked on either side by long white tapers in crystal candelabra.

High Court Affirms Judge South's Decision

The Illinois Supreme court ruled recently that Judge Roscoe South, of the Will county circuit court, was correct when he held that a deed executed several years ago by Mrs. Emma Rees (Clarke), of Mokena, conveying her property to strangers was not valid.

Through her attorney, Pence B. Orr, it was moved two years ago to declare the transaction improper. Judge South heard the case and held with Mr. Orr.

The issues were centered around the mental state of Mrs. Clarke at the time the deed was executed. She was then past 80 years of age. She was blind and living among strangers in California. The consideration for the transfer of 10 acres of land, improved by a two story ten room house, was for $15 a month rental the payment of hospital and medical expenses and the cremation of her body at death.

The other parties were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Myers. They were her tenants when she left for California. During her stay there she is supposed to have executed a deed in their favor. Her signature was by mark.

After hearing the evidence Judge South held that there had not been a proper delivery of the deed and that at the time she purportedly executed the deed, Mrs. Clarke was not mentally or physically able to understand what she was doing.

Attorneys for the defendants appealed to the Supreme court. The opinion was released January 19th.

MEN'S BROTHERHOOD TO SERVE ROAST HAM SUPPER

The voters of the Tinley Park School District 146 will go to the polls on Saturday to decide whether the school shall buy additional property adjoining the present property to be used as a playground. At the present time the playground consists of approximately 30 square feet per child while the recommendation of the State Office of Public Instruction is for 800 square feet per child. The additional property will increase the playground space to nearly the recommended figure.

TINLEY TO VOTE ON SCHOOL PLAY GROUND PROPOSITION

The property is to be purchased through the issuance of School Bonds in the amount of $4000. This will in no way effect any outstanding debts of the school. The bonding power is established and if the voters turn down the proposition the power will remain. Bonds can be issued only for current needs. The taxes on property will not be effected through the issuance of these bonds. The rate of taxation will remain the same as it is now.

The need for an enlarged playground is pressing. At the present time there is no space to conduct organized games out of doors. The new Physical Education law requires that each child have at least 200 minutes of physical education per week. In good weather these classes should be held out of doors so that children may have fresh air which is an aid in their growth and physical development. With the added area it will be possible to develop a program of organized physical education out of doors.

All registered voters of the school district may vote on this proposition. The Tinley Park School district is bounded on the North by 163rd St., on the West by Harlem Ave., on the South by 183rd St. and on the East by a line extending to Austin Ave.

The Tinley Park School is the polling place for the entire district and the polls will be open from 12 o'clock noon until 7 o'clock in the evening on Saturday Feb. 5 1944.

The proposition is whether the School District shall issue bonds in the amount of $4000 for the purpose of purchasing two lots and house to the North and adjoining the present school property.

FRANKFORT WOMEN'S CLUB SPONSORS BAKERY SALE

The Frankfort Woman's Club will sponsor a bakery sale to be held in the Folker's Market Tuesday afternoon Feb. 8 at one o'clock.

Washington, D. C. ARMY DOCTORS

It was lost in the news shuffle, but Dr. John H. Musser of the Tulane university medical school, a member of a special committee named by Secretary of War Henry Stimson to study medical conditions in the army, made some startling admissions recently at a senate committee hearing on the utilization of doctors by the war department.

Testifying before the Pepper subcommittee on wartime health and education at a hearing in Pascagoula, Miss., Musser was asked if the army had too many doctors.

"Yes," he replied. "There has been too much indiscriminate recruiting of medical men without due regard for civilian needs."

"Do you think that the army has utilized its doctors properly?" he was asked.

"Definitely no," replied the Tulane professor. "The present system of medical service in the army is based on a procedure that dates back to the Spanish-American war and calls for the recruiting of a disproportionate number of physicians from civilian life."

To illustrate his point, Doctor Musser pointed out that Tulane university's unit of doctors in the army medical corps had spent more than a year "twiddling their thumbs" at Camp Benning, Georgia, while awaiting a call for overseas duty. At this time, Doctor Musser said, there was a crying need for doctors by civilians.

Doctor Musser said he realized that the need for doctors was far greater than in the last war, but that the army medical corps wasn't making the fullest use of its personnel.

WILD ANIMALS' HOLIDAY

Since the army has a priority on guns and shells, there hasn't been much hunting for two years, with the result that wild animals are creeping up on civilization. Both farmers and state officials are demanding cartridges to drive off this invasion.

War production board has received urgent messages from state officials in every part of the country. Pennsylvania is alarmed at the boldness of bears and deer. New York says rabbits eat Victory gardens. Louisiana needs shotguns to drive off the flocks of rice birds.

This explosive situation was the last task handled by Maury Maverick before he left WPB's government division, to become WPB vice chairman in charge of the small plants division.

He tried to raise the civilian cartridge quota from 12 per cent of normal to 50 per cent. At first, the army was willing. But that was before Cairo-Teheran. After the Big Three powwow the army hinted that it would need everything for the invasion, and declined to pass the ammunition.

When the news reached the backwoods, says Maverick, the deer did a dance, and bears celebrated with big bear hugs.

COSMOPOLITAN CONGRESS

The farm bloc is all-powerful in the house of representatives, but you'd never guess it to judge by the number of members who are real, active farmers. There are only 30.

Lawyers, because of their natural bent for politics, continue to dominate the house membership by an overwhelming majority. Out of a total 435 members, 234 are lawyers. Business men rank next, with a delegation of 60.

There are 27 teachers and professors, 23 writers and newspaper men, 9 former government officials, 9 insurance agents, 4 doctors, 2 engineers, 2 dentists, and 2 certified public accountants.

Only one minister holds a congressional seat, Rep. Charles A. Eaton of New Jersey, former rector of the Madison Avenue Baptist church in New York city, although Rep. Walter H. Judd of Minnesota was a medical missionary in China for several years.

The sports world is represented chiefly by Congressmen Joseph O'Brien of New York, former professional wrestler and football player; Samuel Weiss of Pennsylvania, a football referee who still officiates in National Pro league games; and La Vern R. Dilweg of Wisconsin, former All-America footballer at Marquette university.

The rest of the membership hails from a miscellany of trades and professions, including a number of laboring men, miners and mill workers, two druggists—Representatives Carl Durham of North Carolina and Harve Tibbott of Pennsylvania—and a veterinarian, Congressman George W. Gillie of Indiana.

Because of his interest in Communism, singer Paul Robeson has been prevented from making USO concert tours of U. S. army camps. The state department even denies him a passport to go to England, where he is immensely popular.

Where Some of Those Huge Raids Start

U. S. Flying Fortresses are now using over 11 recently equipped air bases near Foggia, Italy, to drop tons of bombs on Nazi-controlled territory. These bases will make possible a campaign extending over the 600 mile range indicated by the light area on the map. Bombers can take off and return to these bases usually without facing serious enemy opposition.

Flak Towers Take High Raider Toll

This is one of the most successful defense devices developed during Britain's long struggle for survival against Nazi bombers. It is a flak tower of the anti-aircraft command. Such towers proved very effective last summer during the sneak attacks against seaside towns. Last year flak towers accounted for 93 downed enemy planes and 59 "probables."

JESUS FEEDS THE MULTITUDES

LESSON TEXT—Mark 6:35-44; 8:1-9.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.—John 6:35.

Hungry! That word describes the crying need of the greater part of the world's population. Men who have vaunted themselves because of their ability and ingenuity have brought the nations of the earth into such awful confusion that even God's abundant provision cannot reach the needy ones.

God is concerned about man's physical need just as truly as He is about spiritual needs. This story brings Christianity into action on a level that all will appreciate—the need of food for the body. It works there as it does everywhere.

The supply of every need of man is God. "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4:19). Countless Christians have found it to be true that we may trust God—completely—and for everything.

The stories of the feeding of the two groups of people show the wrong and the right attitude toward man's need. In two approaches to the problem the disciples were wrong. Then Christ showed them the right way.

I. They Can Take Care of Their Own Need (6:35, 36).

"Send them away"—that was the plea of the disciples when the multitude of those who had followed Him became hungry. The people were there because they were interested in Christ. They had come in a hurry (v. 33) and had not brought food. The problem was on the disciples' hands, and they sought the easiest way out. Let them shift for themselves—"Send them away."

The church has followed their example in dealing with the social problems of the people down through the years. The result is that being denied fellowship, comfort, and help by a church which was too busy building up a vast organization or a beautiful order of worship, the common people have responded to the appeal of political leaders who have provided a substitute for what the church should have given them.

When Jesus put upon them the direct responsibility to feed the people, the disciples changed their "slogan" and said:

II. We Should Like to Help, but We Cannot (6:37).

Reckoning hastily on what a small boy had brought for his lunch (trust an alert boy to be ready!), the disciples soon demonstrated that it was impossible to feed this great throng. (See similar reasoning in Mark 8:4).

Logic is such a devastating thing when it operates apart from faith in God. They were absolutely right in their reasoning and in their calculations, but they had forgotten the one factor that really counted. Jesus was there, and Jesus is God, and God is omnipotent.

As we face the need of the world now and after the war, we wonder how the peoples of other lands can be fed without depriving our own land of what it needs. It is a great problem, and we ought to pray for those who must work with it.

But let us not forget that all that we have comes from God, and that He is able to do "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think" (Eph. 3:20). The Christ who multiplied the loaves and fishes is our Living Lord today, and ready and able to do it again.

III. Jesus Said, "I Have Compassion on the Multitude" (6:38-44; 8:1-9).

He started right. Instead of shutting His heart against the tender desire to help, He let His love for the people control. Then instead of magnifying the difficulties, He multiplied the provisions. And lo, there was enough for all, and to spare.

"He commanded . . . and they did all eat" (vv. 39, 42). When God speaks, all the limitations of the finite disappear, and the needs of men are fully met—with "twelve baskets full of fragments" left over!

Note the orderly manner in which our Lord met this situation. Five thousand men, with women and children to swell the throng, were seated on the grass. Jesus took the loaves and fishes and blessed them. You who forget to return thanks at the table, notice that quiet and meaningful act. Then He broke the loaves and divided the fishes. No doubt they were multiplied as the disciples passed them out to the people.

God is able to do that very thing even in our day. Perhaps not in just the same manner, but surely those who serve Him have marveled as they have seen that "little is much when God is in it." Let those who labor in difficult places with limited resources take heart—and trust God.

Note the care with which the fragments were collected for future use. It took this war to teach America how shamefully wasteful it has been.

NO! You can't see Inoculating Bacteria

You can't see legume bacteria without a powerful microscope. If you could, you wouldn't know whether they were good bacteria or bad. There is one sure way to get plenty of effective inoculation . . . just ask for NITRAGIN when you buy. NITRAGIN is the oldest most widely used inoculant. For 45 years farmers have used it to get bigger yields of alfalfa, clover, soybeans, and to build soil fertility. It costs only a few cents an acre; but frequently boosts yields up to 50% and more. It pays to inoculate every planting of legumes. Get NITRAGIN where you buy your seed. Look for the yellow can.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

A Wisconsin truck driver recently received a tribute from the Office of the Rubber Director because he risked his life to save the tires on the trailer of a tractor-trailer unit he was driving. The trailer caught fire, but the driver jacked it up and removed the tires while it was ablaze.

The far-reaching influence of the rubber situation will be appreciated when it is known that close to 40% of the motor vehicles ever made in this country were still in service in December, 1941. More than half of them were owned by families with incomes of less than $30 a week.

BLACK SOMBRERO

by CLIFFORD KNIGHT ~ WNU SERVICE

Elsa Chatfield is disinherited by her Aunt Kitty who dies of an overdose of morphine. Hunt Rogers and Barry Madison go to Mexico to solve what they believe to be Aunt Kitty's murder. On arriving they find that Elsa's party has preceded them by plane. James Chesebro is murdered, Elsa's father, Sam, meets death from the sword of a marlin, and George Rumble is murdered and thrown into the sea near the dock. Rogers questions Berta, Sam's wife, and on examining the quilt with which Elsa had beaten Chesebro discovers that it conceals the knife that killed Chesebro. Rogers visits Lombardo and names each of those who had a motive for killing Aunt Kitty.

CHAPTER XIX

"The time Rumble died is important," he said. "The hands of his watch were stopped at nine-nine. But that is an impossible hour; Rumble was alive at that time and with us in the bar. He checked out of the hotel at ten-thirty, and disappeared. His body was found floating later near the wharf. His bag, discovered in the water at the edge of the wharf, indicates that he was, in spite of his quarrel with Dwight Nichols, determined to go aboard the Orizaba and accompany us swordfishing the next day. Rumble was like that, senior; he was a strange man."

"The hour of nine-nine has no meaning, unless we can explain it satisfactorily. That, I think, is quite simple. Of course, the watch could have stopped of itself, but I'm sure that's not the explanation. The first day ashore after the Orizaba arrived in Mazatlan, we met Rumble on the street. The time of day was mentioned. He looked at his watch, which I noted did not agree with mine. In fact, it was two hours slow. He explained it by saying that he was still keeping Los Angeles time, which is two hours slower than Mazatlan time."

"Now, then," Rogers went on earnestly, "assuming that, on the night he died, his watch was still keeping Los Angeles time, what does that signify? He must have died at eleven-nine. That simplifies things immensely. Where were we all at that time? Barry Madison and I at that time were on board the Orizaba. The others—Elsa, Dwight Nichols, Sam Chatfield and Reed Barton—came aboard about midnight. Reed Barton arrived alone at the wharf, having had to go around by his hotel for his things. Elsa, her father, and Dwight Nichols went to the wharf together. What time, Reed, did you reach the wharf?"

"How long had you been waiting when the others arrived?"

"I'd have to guess, Hunt. Perhaps twenty minutes. Maybe half an hour."

"Did you see anything of Rumble?"

"No."

Rogers turned to Dwight. "What time did you reach the wharf?"

"Oh," said Dwight, "we left the hotel at a quarter to twelve. Went down in a taxi. Shouldn't have taken five minutes."

"Now, this question, Dwight: After Barry and I left you and Sam Chatfield together, what happened? Were you together the remainder of the evening?"

Dwight was slow to answer. At length he replied: "No. Sam and I separated at ten-thirty. He said there was something he had to do yet before he could go aboard the Orizaba. He came back about an hour later. It was eleven-thirty, at any rate, when I met him again."

"Perhaps, senior, we have made a wrong assumption somewhere—our discussion has not disclosed the murderer. Perhaps," he paused, his manner somewhat hesitant, "perhaps this testimony you've heard just now seems rehearsed, senior; but I assure you it is not. I have realized that Dwight Nichols and Sam Chatfield could not have been in each other's company all that evening, but I have not known the facts until now."

"Earlier," Rogers continued, a new note of confidence coming into his voice, "I assumed that it was proper to exclude from suspicion all those persons who, subsequently to Katherine Chatfield's death, died by violence. I named Chesebro, Sam Chatfield and Rumble as victims of and not the probable killer."

"Yes, sir."

"Consider for a moment Sam Chatfield—"

"Senior Chatfield?"

"Yes. He had a most excellent motive for killing his sister. Mrs. Nichols, some months ago said this of him: 'He clutched decency to himself with all the passion of a fierce new love.' Now, then, had not his sister, an unmarried woman, disgraced the family by bearing a child? Had she not committed an even greater wrong against his daughter Elsa?"

"And so—" Rogers drew from his pocket the rotogravure clipping and gave it to Lombardo. "After Sam Chatfield had died, I found this on his desk at the rancho. Senior Lombardo, you did not know Chesebro, and, therefore, the point is lost upon you. But the child in the picture bears an unmistakable likeness to Chesebro. I believe that Sam Chatfield did not know that Chesebro was the guilty man until this picture from the paper came into his possession. When it did, Chesebro already was in his house in bed and suffering from a heart attack. Dwight Nichols and Sam Chatfield were of similar build and height. How easy for Pedro, if he did actually see Sam Chatfield on his way to murder Chesebro, to confuse him with Nichols!

"Reed"—Rogers turned abruptly to Reed Barton—"your fish knife was used to kill Rumble. Can you explain that away?"

Reed Barton sat staring over the rail at the town. He shifted his long legs and said: "I can tell you what I think happened, Hunt. The knife was in my room at the hotel the morning I was arrested. Later, when I went to get my things together for the fishing trip, I looked for the knife to take with me, but it was gone. I did not see it again until I found it on Senior Lombardo's desk at headquarters."

"Do you accuse anybody?"

"No. But there is this to think about: While I was in jail, I asked Mr. Chatfield to get my watch from my room at the hotel. He brought it to me a couple of hours later. I've since investigated and I'm convinced that Mr. Chatfield is the only one who visited my room and could have taken it."

"Ah, so?" breathed Lombardo.

"Felipe," the conversation shifted swiftly into Spanish, as Rogers at last addressed the older of the two mariachis, "I want you to answer some questions."

"Si, senior."

"Did Senora Chatfield, send you and Pancho with a note to the rancho?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you see anything of Senora Chatfield when you returned to the wharf?"

"No, sir. And when the launch is gone, Pancho and I go toward the town. Just as we are leaving the wharf the senior with the big sombrero and the fine clothes he passes us going out onto the wharf. And behind him not very far is another senior following him. This is Senior Chatfield. Pancho and I recognize him but we do not speak. We are loafing on the street near the wharf all the time, and soon Senior Chatfield comes walking very fast toward the town. He does not see us. Pancho asks: 'What is his hurry, Felipe?' and I say I do not know. Then I wonder if the senior with the fine clothes is still out on the wharf. And I say to Pancho, 'Let's go and talk to the senior,' because he is un gran caballero, and perhaps we can sing for him."

"Well, senior, we go, Pancho and I. But he is not on the wharf. We think the launch has come and taken him, only the time is too short. But we do not know."

Silence fell upon us at the conclusion of this lengthy account. Rogers thanked the youth and turned to Lombardo.

"Senior," he said, "are you satisfied now, as I am satisfied, that when Sam Chatfield separated from Dwight Nichols at the hotel that night, he followed George Rumble to the wharf because he feared that Rumble would tell what he knew, and killed him with the knife he had taken from Reed Barton's room? And threw the body from the wharf and tossed the bag and the weapon after him, and then returned to meet the others of the party at the hotel?"

"Yes, Senior Rogers, I am satisfied."

"The death of Sam Chatfield can have been only an accident. It occurred before the fate of George Rumble was known, and for that reason confused me. A perfectly natural accident, I should say, and a fate justly due the man."

"I agree, senior."

Rogers abruptly left us and went to the companionway. He disappeared for a few minutes, then returned carrying the huge black sombrero with its silver ornaments. He stopped before us, turned the hat upside down and his fingers slip inside the sweatband. He drew out a slip of paper, and held it out to Lombardo.

"The handwriting is that of Rumble," he said. I noted the immature, schoolboy writing I'd seen before.

"You can verify it at the newspaper office. You will note the names in the following order: Madison, Barton, Rogers, Nichols, Chatfield, Chesebro. Those are names of the men in this party, excepting Rumble's. You note that every name is crossed out in the same heavy pencil line, except the name of Chatfield. For what it's worth, it's the evidence, Senior Lombardo, offered by a dead hand. By what means he discovered Sam Chatfield's guilt we'll never know. The slip was found only last night."

"I am satisfied, Senior Rogers," Lombardo repeated, rising. "I shall go ashore now and set Pedro free. He cannot be guilty now."

As the two shook hands and went down the ladder, followed by Felipe and Pancho, the launch appeared with Elsa, Margaret and Berta, eager now to come aboard, to leave Mazatlan behind them. They paused to say goodbye to Lombardo and Doctor Cruz and the two boys, and then came up the ladder.

We stowed the launch and lashed it down, and an hour or so later in the full sunshine that beat down upon us out of a hot sky we lifted anchor and dropped down stream toward the long swells of the open ocean.

Small Soybean Mills Increase in Midwest

Local Plants Save Long Freight Haul

Small soybean processing mills, big enough to handle the beans grown within a radius of five to ten miles, are being built in many parts of the Middle West. Many are owned by farmer-cooperatives.

In Iowa a recent survey showed that mills are being constructed in 16 communities with several more in the planning stage. Some will be operated in conjunction with country elevators, others as independent enterprises. Eight of these sixteen will be cooperatively owned.

A new solvent process, simple, safe and cheap, has been developed by Dr. O. R. Sweeney, Iowa State college chemist, which he says is well suited to small processing plants. The solvent method now in use is dangerously explosive, so only large factories that can employ the most skilled operators now use it. The hydraulic press method, used by most plants, requires heavy capital outlay.

Small Mills Can Succeed.

But the small local mills, extracting oil by the new process and employing the neighboring farmers during the off-season in the fall and winter, can compete with the big mills by their lower costs, and saving in haulage. Another advantage during this war period when feed is scarce is that farmers can get soybean meal easily from their local mill. As it is now, many stock raisers find it difficult to get back even the meal from their own beans because of freight congestion. It is reported that soybeans from the northern states are sent to cottonseed plants in the south, or other distant points, from which it is difficult to get any meal back.

Postwar prospects for soybean products are giving rise to much anxious debate. Such questions as "What will happen to soybean acreage, now reaching nearly 12 million acres, after the war? How will trade with Manchuria, a surplus soybean growing area, affect the price in the U. S.? How will soybean be able to compete with cheap palm oil and coconut oil from the East Indies and the Philippines? Will there be too many little and big mills built in the U. S. to handle the reduced volume?" These questions are bothering both soybean growers and mill operators.

Different Opinions.

Edward J. Dies, president of the National Soybean Processors association, Chicago, is quoted as saying that the big processors can operate more economically, and the little fellows will be squeezed out when the going gets tough. But down in the country, there are different opinions.

W. E. Simonson and his family have a country soybean processing mill at Quimby, Iowa, where they grind and make 30 to 40 tons of soybean oilmeal and 10,000 pounds of oil a day. Ever since 1937 the mill has made a profit. Farmers come with their beans and take back the pressed-out bean meal. The oil is shipped to the big terminal refineries.

Simonson admits that too many small mills may be built—just as creameries were overbuilt a few years ago.

"But," he added, "the small mills that survive will be able to outlast the big outfits. Why? Because our advantage is in saving freight, in lower buying and selling costs, in lower taxes, in lower labor costs. As the price of oil goes down, these savings will become more important, not less."

Kaffir Grain Is Substitute

For Corn or Barley Feed

Kaffir grain or milo is another energy feed belonging to the sorghum family which can be used to replace either corn or barley in the dairy ration. Kaffir grain contains more fat than barley and more protein than corn.

Buckwheat can be used to a limited extent. Although it is high in fiber and somewhat unpalatable to dairy cattle it could be used up to 20 per cent of the ration if necessary.

ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS horse head is a copy of an Early American hobbyhorse. It is full of dash and spirit yet it is so simple that the original craftsman probably cut it out with an ordinary handsaw and a pocket knife.

A toddler bike is more up-to-date than a hobbyhorse because we know now that it is better for tiny tots to learn to use their legs than to get a sense of motion by rocking. The bike is easy to make of scraps of lumber.

"NO MORE TROUBLE WITH CONSTIPATION!"

If you, too, are disappointed with pills and purgatives, be sure to read this unsolicited letter!

"For several years I was afflicted with common constipation. I tried various remedies, but got only temporary relief. Several months ago, I started eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN each morning, drinking water freely through the day. I have since never had the slightest trouble with constipation. My gratitude to KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN." Mr. H. M. Riley, 11 E. Division Street, Chicago, Ill.

Scientists say KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN can really "get at" a common cause of constipation—lack of sufficient "cellulose" elements in the diet—because it is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements! They work by helping the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative. Doesn't "sweep you out!" It's a gentle-acting, "regulating" food.

If you have constipation of this type, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN or several ALL-BRAN muffins regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you, too, don't cheer its welcome relief! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Last Friday evening, twenty-three of the Christian Fishermen Group of Tinley Park attended the Missionary service in the Calvary Baptist church of Lincoln Estates. The group appreciates very much the invitation extended and enjoyed the Christian fellowship of the message on the fine work being done at the Faith Mission in Chicago. Also they enjoyed the picture. We do not have to travel to India and Africa to do missionary work as there is plenty for us to do here near us, even the Jesus said to go into all parts of the world and preach the gospel. The next meeting will be held to-night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Voelker, 17810 Oak Park Ave., at 8 o'clock. Mr. Stanley Lund, Evangelist of Markham will be the speaker.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt appreciation and thanks for the many acts of kindness and sympathy shown us by our relatives, neighbors and friends in our sudden death bereavement. We thank the pastors, Rev. J. L. McKelvey, Rev. L. E. Weinreich and Rev. John Holland for their words of comfort, the singer Arthur DeVol, Jr., for his songs and all who sent floral offerings and who donated the use of their automobiles.

4 War Veterans Named Convention Delegates

These four men who served in World War 1 over there who wish to serve in World War 2 over here, in announcing their candidacy for the election at the primaries April 11th next, as delegates and alternates to the Republican National Convention to be held in Chicago this June have adopted the following slogan as the keynote of their platform, "America Forever, Republicans Together. Willkie never".

Petitions are now being circulated through the eleventh Congressional District bearing the names of all four candidates, Chas. M. Burgess of Kane County and Win G. Knoch of DuPage County for delegates and David R. Joslyn of McHenry County, and Milton T. Sonntag of Will County as alternates.

Milton T. Sonntag was born in Plainfield in 1897 and has been a resident there all of his life. Served overseas in World War 1 and is now the manager of the Plainfield Grain Company, a farmer owned organization with five branches in DuPage, Kendall and Will Counties. Mr. Sonntag served Will County as Probate Clerk and was the only Republican elected on the Will County ticket in 1934.

He is a non-member representative of the farm interest on the Chicago Board of Trade, is the present Commander of the Plainfield Post of the American Legion and is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Chairman of the Civilian Defense of Will County and well known in civic and fraternal organizations throughout this community, is married and a member of the Methodist church.

Ration Point Timetable

MEAT POINT VALUES UP, CANNED VEGETABLES DOWN

Reductions in the ration point value of major canned vegetables and increases in point value of most beef, lamb and veal cuts, and in cheese, were announced by OPA in an order which became effective on January 30. New point values remain in force through March 4.

Butter is unchanged at 16 points a pound. Lard is up one point to three a pound. Beef steak is up two points a pound. Other beef cuts in most cases are increased one point. Veal, lamb and mutton cuts are increased by one to two points. Pork loin and Canadian bacon are up one point. Other pork items are unchanged. Four-point reductions were made in all canned fish. Oysters remain at four points a pound.

Fuel Oil Consumption
Fuel oil consumers in the Peoria area of OPA should not have burned more than 59 per cent of their total yearly allotment as of January 31, it is announced by the county war price and rationing board. In issuing its weekly report, OPA said that householders will have to increase their efforts to "live within their oil rations for the remainder of the winter".

Committee on Onion Sets
Two Illinoisans are on an advisory committee composed of onion set growers, which has been set up by OPA at Washington. Members include Henry VanDer Giessen, Harvey, Illinois, and Tunis Verduin

South Holland, Illinois. Onion sets, used for planting purposes, were put under uniform dollars-and-cents maximum prices on December 23, 1943.

Indelible Pencil is O. K.

An OPA amendment to mileage rationing, effective February 5, provides that motorists may use an indelible pencil, as well as pen and ink, to write their license numbers and state of registration of their vehicle on each gasoline coupon.

Green Stamps Good February 1
Green stamps, K, L, and M in War Ration book four will be good from February first through March twentieth for buying canned foods shown on the official table of processed foods. These are the last green stamps on the page. They are also the last green stamps consumers will be using for the time being. The new blue stamps, to be used with ration tokens, are good beginning February 27.

Truck Tire Scarcity
The truck tire situation will continue to be severely short for some time, says the OPA. No immediate relief is in sight. Military demand takes almost two-thirds of all truck tires produced. Recapping for truck tires also has been removed from rationing to expedite this conservation help.

Lost Ration Books
The Dead Letter Office will get your ration books if you don't watch out, says an OPA commentator. Yes, that's the fate of all lost ration books which do not have the owners' correct addresses on their covers. What about yours? Is your correct address on the cover of each one of your ration books. You better see that it is. Hundreds of lost ration books dropped into the mails by finders are being sent to the Dead Letter Office every month because no address is given on the cover.

Home Canning Sugar
Sugar stamp No. 40 in War Ration Book four, authorizing a consumer to obtain five pounds of sugar for home canning becomes valid February 1, it is announced by the county war price and rationing board. This allowance will be part of the total allowance for the 1944 canning season. This stamp may be used by the consumer through February 28, 1945.

ORLAND PARK

Dear Editor:

I wish to express my thanks to the American Legion Auxiliary and to the chairman, Mrs. Kruspe, for the thoughtful Christmas gift though it found its way here by way of Randolph Field, Texas. Even though it was late for Christmas it arrived on my birthday.

Our squadron, made up of eleven officers, celebrated my birthday by having three major accidents and a minor one. (Why was I born!) The squadron commander seemed very unhappy and dismissed us early. I hope I'm as lucky tomorrow as I was today.

Sincerely,

Ray M. Glahn, 2nd Lt. Army of United States, Williams Field, Arizona.

Jan. 21, 1944

Orland Park Herald:
Have been receiving the Herald regularly and appreciate your efforts and kindness in keeping the boys in the service up to date on the news. Some buddies next to me are reading their home town papers now.

I imagine it is quite a job keeping up with all the changes of addresses. Will let you know of any changes of address in the future.

Thanking you again, I remain,
Yours truly,
Cpl. J. F. Riemenschneider,

ORLAND SERVICEMEN'S NEWS
Mrs. H. Kruspe, Chr.

Overseas

Dear Mrs. Kruspe:
I received your package the day after Christmas and was very glad to get it. It was damaged but most of it was in good shape and it really tasted swell. It sure is fine of you to send packages to all the boys. It helped my morale as it probably did the others to know that our friends back home are doing their best to help us. I wish to thank you again for the swell package.

As ever,
Art Utte
Hobbs, New Mexico

Jan. 7, 1944

Dear Mrs. Kruspe:
Once again I wish to thank you and the Auxiliary for your very kind gift. I say again that the boys in service are certainly, not forgotten by your organization and you'll never know how much it means to us. In thanking you for the last gift I not only wish to thank you for myself, but also for eleven other boys, that consist in making up what we call the dirty dozen of 2-B. Some time ago when a few of us boys used to spend our spare hours in the Depot of Orland, Carl Qungley very descreetly called us by that name and I sort of borrowed his idea to bear name upon 12 of us who eat, sleep and work together at all times here at Hobbs. I would never want to make the army a career, but I certainly will have to put in a good word for it, for I've met fellows in the service that I'll never be able to forget. Friendship is closer in the army than in any other place I know. And I hate to think of how it would be without it.

I suppose you folks at home are struggling with cold weather, snow and ice. We've had very little of all, but still the weather is usually warm but awfully windy.

In closing I wish to thank you again for your very appreciated gift, and in hopes of seeing you all again soon.

Bye for now,
Don Cleveland,
Somewhere in Tennessee

TAKE CARE OF YOUR ELECTRIC APPLIANCES... THEY'RE SCARCE IN WARTIME

I get better service from my electric washer by following these suggestions

1. Follow manufacturer's instructions on how much clothing your washer should hold.

2. Rinse wringer rolls and wipe dry. When not in use, always release pressure on wringer rolls, so they will not become flat on one side. If your washer has a spinner dryer, clean it with fresh water, rinse, wipe with a dry cloth after each day's washing.

3. Put enough hot water in to fill it to the waterline after clothes are in.

4. Be careful not to chip or crack porcelain. Chipped spots may rust and stain clothing.

5. Fill the tub with fresh, clean water after washing. Remove and rinse agitator or suction cups. If your washer has a pump or lint trap, run water through it until it is cleaned. Then drain washer and rinse tub thoroughly. When all water has run out of tub, wipe dry with a soft cloth to remove any soap or lint.

6. Never allow dry suds to remain in washer.

7. Have a serviceman inspect your washer occasionally. Follow manufacturer's recommendations on lubrication.

8. Connecting cord should be wiped dry after disconnecting and put loosely in tub. Some washers are provided with hooks on which to wind cord.

9. If motor fails to start, disconnect current promptly, or you may damage your washer. If motor gets wet, dry it immediately, but disconnect first! Do not run motor while wet.

Dear Mr. Semmler:

Thanks for sending me the paper. Keeps me caught up on the hometown news. I qualified for Pilot, Navigator and Bombardier at SAA-CC and was classified as Pilot. Then I requested Navigation upon recommendation due to urgent need for Navigators. This is Pre-Flight school for Navigators and Bombardiers.

Wouldn't know it is winter here. Temp. around 70. Had unusual snow about one inch, at SAACC but it didn't snow here 220 miles away.

Dear Sir:

Just a few lines to let you know that all is well with me. Everything is going along smoothly here but it gets a little monotonous. The weather is quite warm with quite a bit of rain these days.

I want to thank the Mokena Women's Service Club for the nice Xmas package and the Methodist church for the "Strength for Service". Then to all the people for the Xmas cards which I would like to answer but do not have the time and last but not least I want to thank them for the News-Bulletin. It is a treat to read what is going on at home. Sometimes it is pretty old when it arrives but I enjoy it anyway.

I am enclosing a "Guinea Gold" (newspaper) I thought perhaps you haven't seen one. It is wildly sought after here. I'll close hoping I may spend the next holiday season back in the home town.

Sincerely,

Mike Roberts.

Editors Note: We received the paper you sent and thanks a lot for it. It is the first one we've seen and it has been carefully read by all.

Service Men's Committee.

Jackson, Tenn.

Dear Friends:

I wish to express my thanks for the Xmas box which I received. I wanted to write sooner but was unable to because I was transferred from Farragut to San Diego. I'm stationed here at the Navy Repair base for 10 weeks and possibly 15. The regular welding course is 10 weeks but I may be sent to the advanced or underwater welding school which is 5 weeks more.

The weather down here certainly agrees with me, it is just like spring back home, (only it rains a little more here.)

We get liberty 3 nights out of 4 but we can't always take advantage of that because there is a lot of studying to this course and also other things we have to do, such as wash, guard duty, etc.

Before I left Farragut I went to see George Lauffer and we had a long chat about old times back home. He was Athletic Manager for his company and he was upholding the old Mokena tradition of having a winning team. His basketball team had won the Camp Hill championship. Our company won the Camp Bannion championship, on which I was the center but we weren't lucky enough to be able to play against one another in the Station Tourney, (we got beat in the second game for the station's championship.)

If there is anyone from back home stationed here I certainly would appreciate it if you would send his address so I could look him up. Or if someone is in Los Angeles I would be able to go see him over a weekend.

Well I'll have to close now its about time for the lights to go out and I wish to say again thanks a million and that comes from my mates too, they helped eat the candy, for the swell box and here's hoping I see you all soon.

Sincerely,

Hans Mueller, San Francisco, Cal.

Letters From Our Boys and Girls Jan. 21, 1944

"This is to thank you for the much appreciated Christmas box. It was so much fun opening the different packages and to find that each one was so useful. Being a stranger to you, I was more than pleased that you should consider me a part of your community."

Sincerely,
Judith V. Warracut, Ft. Worth, Tx.

What a happy surprise I received when your package arrived. It was one of the most useful and generous selections that could have been made for a Serviceman. I'm sure that all the other Mokena boys that got their Christmas presents were equally pleased. Thanks again. Very truly yours,
Frederick Whitlark, Chicago.

The Paperhangers stopped the fast moving Oilers and took two games to increase their lead to three games over the Oilers. The Paper men looked like champions when their lead was being challenged and now are in a favorable spot to hold the top perch to the end of the season.

The Bankers won two games from the Smokers to go into a tie with the Oilers for second place. The V-Eighters dropped two games to the Robins and are only one game out of fifth position on their downward trend.

Looks like Rudy Marschke has the individual lead all sewed-up with Andy Bueschel, Charlie Burkhardt and Hamilton battling for the runnerup position. Next Monday night the Paperhangers take on the easy fast declining V-Eighters while the Oilers may hit a snag in the revival Smokers and the Bankers roll the ever dangerous Robins.

The Boy Scouts wish to thank their many friends for the donation of waste paper. Up until the present writing a little more than three tons have been collected. Mr. Town has been taking this paper to Chicago and has received about $38.00 to be used for the Scouts. Should any one have more paper to dispose of, please call either Richard Farr, Ralph Town or Ed Manning. As a much higher price is obtained from the sale of magazines when sold separately, it is requested that these be kept in separate bundles from the other paper.

Orland Park Scout Troop 51 and Cub Pack 18 are planning a special observance of this occasion. WHO are the greatest 12 football players that ever walked on a field? This has nothing to do with all-star or all-time outfits, picked by position. It is all man by man, regardless of position.

I worked out this idea with Steve Owen, head coach of the Giants, and Frank Thomas, head coach of Alabama. This debate lasted until a Louisiana sun came creeping in through the window.

With no thought of any ranking in any set order, here was the list we finally agreed upon.

Jim Thorpe, Carlisle Indians, Canton Bulldogs.
Pudge Heffelfinger, Yale, and pro-contacts after he had passed 50.

Bronko Nagurski, Minnesota and Chicago Bears.

Sammy Baugh, TCU and Washington Redskins.

Don Hutson, Alabama and Green Bay.

Red Grange, Illinois and Chicago Bears.

Mel Hein, Washington State and New York Giants.

Wilbur ("Fats") Henry, W. and J., Canton Bulldogs.

Ernie Nevers, Stanford, Duluth Eskimos and Chicago Cards.

George Gipp, Notre Dame.

Bill Hewitt, Michigan and Chicago Bears.

Cal Hubbard, Centenary, Geneva, Giants and Green Bay.

Facing the Blast

This list will face quite a blast. Hurry-up Yost will be hurt because we left off Willie Heston, who played before the forward pass. Coach Stagg will feel the same way about Walter Eckersall, and Yale men will wonder why Frank Hinkey or Tom Shevlin were ditched. Both were brilliant.

But there are many points to consider here. One is length of service. For example, take the case of Mel Hein. Hein was a high school star for three years. He was a college star for three years. After that he just completed 13 years with the New York Giants, in which time he was picked as all-pro center seven times, an amazing record.

Hein is one of the greatest linemen that ever played. There could be no argument about such men as Jim Thorpe, who could do everything, Bronko Nagurski, a great tackle, a great end and a great fullback. One of the greatest.

The same goes for Don Hutson, one of the most amazing of the entire crop. A great artist for many years. Certainly no one could leave off Red Grange. "Not only one of the great ball carriers of all time," Steve Owen says, "but also one of the best of all defensive backs. Grange and Battles were the two best ball carriers I ever saw—outside of Jim Thorpe."

Bo McMillin picks the 260-pound Cal Hubbard as the greatest single football player, the most valuable star he ever saw. Hubbard was a great end—a great tackle and a master at backing up the line where his 260 pounds and his starting speed made him invaluable.

Frank Thomas threatened to leave our board if we left off George Gipp, who never played pro football. "Gipp was a great runner," Thomas said, "a fine passer, a brilliant kicker and a winning gambler on the field. I have known only one Gipp."

"Wilbur Henry of W. and J. was to line play what Thorpe was to back-field play." Both Owen and Thomas voted. "Henry is the greatest lineman that ever played football." Anyway Henry stands out as one of the all-time stars.

Beating 11 Nagurskis

Bill Hewitt was one of the great ends of all time. There were games where he figured in practically every play. There are those who believe 11 Hewitts could beat 11 Nagurskis, which is praise enough.

I wanted Ken Strong on this squad, but they figured that injuries had cut down his top speed. Strong is still something to remember as a great football player.

Naturally there were many others. But those who had entered the pro circuit got the call.

Anyway this is a list that is open to any challengers that might come in. At least it's an interesting argument with a list sifted from all the thousands who came along—and starred through so many years.

Pro vs. College Football

Those college players who take up pro football and then get busy telling everyone that pro football is the cleaner, harder game, in which the player can have much more fun, are simply lacking in sportsmanship.

Any football player with the right spirit should still be for his college and the college game that gave him a chance to turn pro. Professional baseball can get along without college baseball, although many big league stars are ex-college men.

DESPITE shortages of equipment, caddies and traveling equipment, golf play in 1943 was only 28 per cent below that of pre-Pearl Harbor 1941.

The executive committee of the United States Golf association revealed recently that membership in the association dropped from 758 clubs a year ago to 703, but that 27 other clubs joined the public links division.

Golf in general can take a bow for its showing during the past year. Certain groups, apprehensive about the future, had voted to curtail activities almost to the vanishing point. Immediately after the declaration of war there may have been reasons for such a drastic step, but the time for that is removed. It is distinctly not to their credit that they have made no attempt to resume at least a part of their former programs.

The drawing power of golf is evidenced by the fact that 483 reporting clubs raised $174,408 during 1943 for war charities with club tournaments and sold $8,548,920 in war bonds. Bob Hope and Bing Crosby, golfing-radio artists, were given special recognition for their help.

Certainly it is impossible for golf to carry on all of its former activities. A large number of the top flight professional stars are in service. But the same is true of baseball, professional football and all other sports. They haven't thrown in the sponge. Neither should golf.

The Future of Outdoor Sports

A few short weeks ago one of the nation's leading sportsmen voiced the opinion that Americans may be expected to spend $3,644,000,000 a year for recreation within five years of the war's end.

This figure, based on a national income of $135,000,000,000 which economists have agreed will maintain our national economy, is more than twice that spent for recreation in 1935 and 1936.

This huge amount of money—representing 3.3 per cent of all consumer expenditures—will be spent for all forms of recreation. It is obvious that hunting and fishing loom large in plans for future sports activities. And it is just as obvious that many localities have given too little thought to the future.

Sportsmen's groups in Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin—in fact, in almost all states where fish and game are comparatively abundant—have done much to guarantee good fishing and hunting for the future. They have cooperated with conservation groups, governmental and private, and have done whatever possible to assure good hunting and fishing for fellow sportsmen in time to come.

Cooperation

Several states have done a good job in conservation matters. They should and can do better. Any sportsmen's club worthy of the name is willing to cooperate wholeheartedly in any kind of venture aimed at furthering the cause of hunting or fishing. Politics have no place in conservation but, sadly enough, few states are simon-pure in this regard.

Theorists have attempted to explain that it is impossible for a lake to become "fished out." Their reasons are varied and interesting. But outdoor men in almost every section of the country can demonstrate otherwise. From their own experience the veterans can prove the difference between "then and now."

The same is true of wild game in almost all forms. In certain hunting areas the unfortunate individual who fails to bag a deer, for instance, need only lay his money on the line and a local poacher will fill his needs.

Many newcomers will be included among postwar fishermen and hunters. Millions of servicemen have learned to live out of doors and, despite the horrors of war, a large percentage of them have learned more about nature than they would have during peacetime. When they return they will give more attention to activities which take them outdoors. That means hunting and fishing, camping, hiking and canoeing.

For the most part, state conservation groups will do everything possible to take care of existing natural resources, but those official units need the active cooperation of every man interested in wild life.

True cooperation can come only with an increased appreciation for our resources and less wholesale despoiling of them.

SPORTS SHORTS

Wes Ferrell, former big league pitcher, won a share of both first and second places in the pro-amateur golf tourney at Pinehurst, N. C. He paired with one pro to win the event and later teamed with another to take second.

Baltimore has 400 amateur basketball teams this winter.

'FREEDOM FROM REGULATION' IS WHAT PAXTON, ILL., WANTS

Dislike of Government Rulings and Redtape Evidenced By Citizens of Midwest Community.

By BARROW LYONS

(EDITOR'S NOTE—This is one of a series of articles written for this paper by Barrow Lyons, staff correspondent of Western Newspaper Union. He has just completed an extended trip through the nation and in these reports gives his first-hand impressions of what rural America is thinking as we enter the third year of war and the first weeks of a presidential election year. Any opinions expressed are the writer's and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

PAXTON, ILL.—Dislike of Washington and all its works could hardly be found in more concentrated form than in Paxton, Illinois, a town of 3,200 persons in the heart of the corn belt. Only a few citizens will admit there is anything the New Deal has done that has helped this county seat.

But Ford county holds one of the most prosperous rural communities in Midwestern United States. Before the war, in January, 1939, the deposits in Paxton's two banks totaled $1,631,000; but today they sum up to $4,532,000, an increase of 178 per cent in four years. Paxton is one of the most conservative places in conservative Illinois, which Wendell Willkie has called "the blackest spot on my map." Paxton spurns Willkie as "nothing but a New Dealer."

Clothing merchants in Paxton are making more money than at any time since the boom days of the '20s. A farmer recently calculating his income tax figured he had made a clear profit before taxes of more than $20,000 in this crop year on a gross income of $27,000—and he hadn't sold his 1943 corn crop yet. Most of his income was realized on last year's corn he had held.

So easy is it for shops to sell what merchandise they can get that advertising is at a minimum. Nevertheless, Paxton boasts both a daily and weekly newspaper. The Paxton Daily Record, a four-page paper, sells enough advertising space to break about even; but the Paxton Record, a weekly, makes money in spite of the fact that national automotive advertising has virtually disappeared, and the oil companies buy only about one-tenth of the space they used to take.

Publisher Looks Ahead To Postwar Years

Herbert N. Stevens, joint owner with his brother, Harold H. Stevens, of the Paxton newspapers and printing shop, says they are running their plant now with 13 employees instead of the customary 20. But Mr. Stevens is certain that after the war good times for the printer will return, because there will be sales advertising as never seen before. No depression is in sight for the immediate postwar years, Mr. Stevens is sure—so he has just ordered a new press to be delivered when peace arrives. He also feels confident that the New Deal regime will be a thing of the past then. He explained:

"Ford County has had about as much of Washington as it can stand. I wouldn't say Paxton was just Republican. There are some Republicans around here who have voted for Roosevelt, you know. Party designations are losing significance. We are just as anti-Willkie as we are anti-Roosevelt. We think he's nothing but a New Dealer."

"When the boys come back from the war you're going to find the greatest bunch of rugged individualists you ever saw. We talk to every boy who comes back on furlough. They can't understand why the government tolerates this strike and slow-down business."

Mr. Stevens can't understand why the government should want 35 million dollars to advertise to get people back on the farm, while the United States Employment Service is advertising in his newspapers for men on the farm to work in war industries. Nor can he see why the soy bean processing factory in Gibson City, 15 miles away, can't get all the soy beans it can handle, because the Commodity Credit corporation directs locally grown beans to cotton ginning mills in Tennessee, despite the fact that the soy bean cake left after pressing out the oil is shipped back to Paxton for cattle feed. These are the things that have turned Paxton people against the New Deal. Mr. Stevens expresses vocally what many others feel.

Incidentally, it should be noted that there is not a labor union office in Ford county and the farmers are strongly anti-labor. In the last election the Republicans scored about five votes to every two Democratic votes, the latter coming mostly from railway workers, a few craftsmen and some tenant farmers.

Carl Shelby, Paxton's grain dealer, gave the clearest summary to Paxton's viewpoint. He is a business man, but his trade concerns the farmer's welfare most closely.

'Too Much Regulation' From Washington

"The thing that bothers us most is that there is too much regulation. The farm program has a tendency to tell the farmer exactly what he can do—and that applies pretty much to the business man too. These regulations were put on when times were hard and prices low, and conditions were benefited by regulation. There seems to be no tendency to drop them when times show improvement. The men in Washington made their program so that a man was penalized if he didn't go along with it. He was almost forced to follow to be in good standing with his neighbors."

"In the grain business we were forced to take whatever the Commodity Credit corporation allowed us to handle, do what they ordered us to do and wait until they got good and ready to pay us for that service. When a fellow is used to doing what he likes, and then someone comes along and tells him what he has to do—well, that gets under the skin."

"What we liked about the old free competition system was that foresight and intelligence were worth something. You might lose money in hard times, but you were allowed to make it in good times, and if you didn't waste it you generally came out all right in the long run. Now they don't let us make money when times are good, and they can't give us any assurance that times will always be good. If they could do that we wouldn't mind giving up some freedom."

"When you once start trying to control economic conditions you have to slap on more and more controls to cover the situations you couldn't foresee, and the thing grows and grows. That's the direction the New Deal seems to be headed in now, and most of us around here think it's time to call a halt and go in the other direction for a while."

As Paxton, Illinois, Views It . . .

Let T. M. Brady, manager, explain Paxton's REA cooperative:

"We have paid all interest and principal when due, and have made advance payments on principal. Our kilowatt-hour consumption is growing steadily with increased use of electricity on the farm. War has given an additional impetus to the introduction of electrical labor-saving devices. Farmers are now installing batteries of chick brooders and pig brooders, and poultry lighting is increasing. Farmers around here say this is the greatest service they have received through the government, although they organized this co-operative themselves, provide the control of management and pay for all the service they get. There is not a subsidy of any kind in it."
